

How about a video where people who went to high school in the 1970s get all dressed up in suits and ties and talk about “programs for superior academic achievement and blahty blah blah blah”? How about NOT?

Coming soon — a film starring today's students talking about what they need to be better prepared for life after graduation.

It's a chance for students to talk about how we picture our lives after high school and what we're doing now to make it come true.

It's about preparing for life in the real world, where not everyone fits into the same mold.

Look for more details on this video project coming soon. And get ready for your chance to be heard.

It's people like me talking about what's solid, what's lame, and what we would do if the 40-somethings just chilled out and let us take control of our future.
